

And another thing...Now that we have fewer owners of radio and TV stations It's easier for the government and corporate america working in concert to decide unilaterally not to notify the citizens or to give out little sound bites--we're given 3 or 4 sentences about most happenings that affect our lives directly and we're given days and days of coverage about the sensational stuff--if it bleeds, it leads and leads. TV is the worst offender.

Radio and some newspapers are more useful to me in my everyday life. Most TV is just so much eye candy--entertainment at best.
